MADDISON HITS OUT AT TRADE UNIONS

NSW Minister of Justice, Mr. Maddison, delivered a strongly-worded tirade in support of the proposed South African sporting tours at Hornsby last Saturday.

At the official opening of Hornsby North Public School, Mr. Maddison spoke at length of the need for schools to foster 'greater tolerance for the views, needs and attitudes of others'.

Mr. Maddison said there needed to be an understanding of contrary points of view and a willingness to accept the rights of others to express these points of view.

The Minister criticised what he termed 'sections of the trade union movement which have stepped completely outside their traditional role and moved directly into the field of politics'.

Mr. Maddison also warned parents in the audience that higher taxation was the only means by which the government could give greater priority to education in Hornsby and other rapidly expanding areas without affecting other services.

The school began functioning in 1967. During the four years of its operation enrolment had increased from 46 to 385, and is expected to rise to 515 next year.

Mr. Maddison opened his address with an explanation of the difficulties facing the government in the field of education.

Heavily veiled a little surprised when he suddenly turned to the question of the South African tours.

Speaking of the changing role of education, Mr. Maddison said there had developed greater critical faculties among young people.

"On the question I come back to is 'Are we a more tolerant society or merely more permissive?'" he said.

"On one hand we have people continually advocating the abolition of all forms of censorship and very often this is the same group which is advocating returns of various internationalists.

INTOLERANCE

"The same group at other times advocates free movement of citizens between nations without let or hindrance.

"Yet on the other hand this group seeks to deny the status of South African football and cricket teams to visit Australia this year."

POLICE ALERT ON CRACKER LOUITS

By PETER MAHONEY

Police will ride with firemen to Sydney fires on cracker night next Saturday.

A police spokesman said this unprecedented action followed an increase over the years in damage caused by fireworks.

In addition, suburban police patrols would be strengthened and prompt action would be taken against hoodlums using fireworks indiscriminately or lighting fires in streets.

The Publicity Committee for Fireworks Safety has distributed to schools and shops 850,000 leaflets giving tips on safety and first aid.

This year it has withdrawn a suggestion that rockets be launched from bottles following reports that children were blowing up bottles with bungers.

Now the suggestion is that rockets should be placed in a pipe half-buried in earth.

The chairman of the committee, Mr R. E. Gain, this week urged people to supervise their children.

Huge rockets

Cracker night is becoming more and more a community affair, with scores of schools combining the fireworks with a barbecue.

The main (250 pupils) Hornsby North public school expects a crowd of 2,000 at its bonfire, where a gymnastic display will be an added attraction.

Oyster Bay Convalescent School's fireworks night will have a ban on bungers.

The State Government, in the interests of safety, has been quietly reducing the size of fireworks that may be sold legally.

For example, the biggest bunger available this year is three inches long and less than an inch in diameter compared with four-inch long, one-inch wide bungers available previously.

Spectacle

Shop assistants said there was little demand for bigger fireworks such as huge British-made rockets which, if imported, would retail at about $1.50.

Miss Phil Brennan, supervisor of the fireworks sector at Grace Brothers in Broadway, said that over the years people were inclining more towards fireworks that provided a spectacle rather than a loud noise.

She said old favourites such as sparklers, Roman candles and flower pots are as popular as ever.

Many people liked the made-up bags of crackers for 50 cents or $1 a time, some spent up to $15.

Fete and Fireworks

Hornsby North Public School's P. & C. Association will conduct a "giant spectacular" on Saturday, June 12.

It will be the fourth annual event of its kind, and the organisers claim that last year's attendance of 1500 persons will be exceeded.

The day will begin with the opening of a fete at 3.30 p.m. This will be followed by a steak barbecue, and in the evening there will be a gigantic fireworks display.

This will be mounted by Howard and Sons, the experts who control the fireworks exhibition at the Royal Easter Show each year.

Fireworks of all descriptions, costing about $500, will be exploded

Fireworks display

Sir,

We read with interest the letter appearing in your publication of May 19 on fireworks and parents' misgivings regarding children's safety.

Our school, Hornsby North Public, is running its 4th annual fireworks display on Saturday, June 12, and is very conscious of the safety factor.

This giant fireworks display is organised by Howard and Sons, of Royal Easter Show fame. In this period there has not been one casualty.

A charge of $1 adults and 50c children is payable and this includes both the fireworks display and a hot barbecue tea.

Fireworks Committee,
Hornsby North
